The Visibility Booster

14 things that get your Airbnb seen — and booked

THE PREMISE

Most empty listings aren't bad.
They're invisible.

Airbnb doesn't show guests the best property. It shows the property most likely to get booked and reviewed well.

Those are different things — and the gap between them is where your occupancy goes.

Everything that follows is a lever you control. Work down the list in order — the first five move the most.

Start where the algorithm looks first.

01

Reply within an hour, every time

Response rate and speed feed directly into ranking — and guests book whoever answers first. Set saved replies and phone notifications. Falling below a 90% response rate quietly buries a listing.

02

Turn on Instant Book

Listings that need approval rank lower and lose impulse bookings — most weekend bookings. Keep control by requiring verified ID and setting clear house rules instead.

03

Update your calendar every few days

Airbnb favours listings that look actively managed. Even opening the app and confirming availability signals the listing is alive. A calendar untouched for weeks is treated as stale.

I · THE FIVE THAT MATTER MOST

04

80%

of the decision is the first image

Fix the first photograph

On a phone it is roughly 80% of the decision. Lead with your single most impressive view — not the front door, not the lobby. Test a new first image for two weeks and compare views.

05

-25-30%

below target for your first ten bookings

Price low, deliberately

A listing with no reviews cannot win at full price. Collect ten reviews fast, then raise in steps. Wasting the new-listing boost at a price nobody books is the costliest mistake here.

Be findable in every search you qualify for.

06 Write a title that says what, why and where

"Sea-view 3BR villa with private pool · 5 min to Ashwem" beats
"Beautiful villa in Goa". Guests scan titles; specifics stop the scroll.

07 Tick every amenity you genuinely have

Guests filter by amenity — a missing tick removes you from entire searches: WiFi speed, parking, workspace, kitchen, AC, pet-friendly. Never tick one you don't have.

08 Lower your minimum nights

A two-night minimum removes you from every one-night search — in city markets, up to half the demand. Try one night midweek, keep two at weekends.

09 Open your calendar further ahead

Many guests book three to six months out, especially for peak season and weddings. A calendar open only 60 days ahead is invisible to them.

II · NINE MORE THAT COMPOUND — REPUTATION & REACH

- | | | |
|----|-------------------------------------|--|
| 10 | Add weekly and monthly discounts | Longer stays cut cleaning and vacancy risk, and Airbnb surfaces them to long-stay searchers. Even 10% weekly, 20% monthly. |
| 11 | Never cancel a booking | Host cancellations suppress ranking for months. Move the guest, refund generously — but don't cancel. |
| 12 | Chase reviews in the first 48 hours | Ask in person at check-out and once by message. Early on, review velocity matters more than count. |
| 13 | List on a second platform | Booking.com fills midweek gaps and reaches a different traveller. Sync calendars to avoid double-booking. |
| 14 | Build a direct route | A simple page, a WhatsApp number, a link in your Instagram bio. No commission — and yours forever. |

Ten reviews at 4.9 beats forty at 4.6.

The only visibility an algorithm can't change is a direct booking.

YOUR FIRST WEEK

Start with these five, this week.

- ☐ Turn on Instant Book and set enquiry notifications on your phone.
- ☐ Swap your first photograph for your single most impressive view.
- ☐ Tick every honest amenity and drop minimum nights midweek.
- ☐ Open your calendar six months ahead; add weekly and monthly discounts.
- ☐ Ask every departing guest for a review — in person, and once by message.

Then change one thing at a time — and compare views and bookings against the previous fortnight.

RED FLAG OUTPOST CLASSIC

Or let someone do all fourteen for you.

Everything in this guide is work — daily pricing, hourly replies, calendars, reviews, cleaning, repairs. Most owners manage it for three months, then stop. Occupancy follows.

We design, brand, launch and run your property completely. You pay rent and electricity. That's the list.
